

Listening Lucy

Dear Listening Lucy,

I've been best friends with a girl for about three years now. We've spent a lot of time together, especially outside of school. Our families have even been on holiday to France together. Suddenly, though, my feelings have changed for her and I've started thinking about her a lot more. I really fancy her and I want to ask her to be my girlfriend. What should I do? I don't know how she feels and don't want to spoil our friendship.
